Laminate flooring is actually constructed of 4 layers; wear, design, core, and the back layer. Each layer serves a distinct purpose and are fused together using high heat and intense pressure. Below is a breakdown of these layers.

Wear Layer: top layer; is a clear layer that is made of aluminum oxide that protects against fading, stains, and surface burns.

Decor Layer: above the core layer; has a high-resolution photograph of the floor's surface appearance.

Core Layer: above the back layer; is a durable, high-density board that protects from indentations and moisture?

Back Layer: bottom layer; responsible for protecting the plank against moisture, and balances the floor.
